AGGREGATE & RECYCLING CONVEYORS

Denver, CO – October 2004: Colorado has been a mining-mecca since gold prospectors moved west from Georgia in 1859. In today's environment, heavy-construction is everywhere you see development- mining has come main stream and digging into dirt and rock has become a multi-billion dollar industry.

Recently, one such mining company came to Amware to inquire about our abilities to assemble their products, mobile conveyors, and store them for later distribution throughout the Rocky Mountain region. Today, several of these conveyers have been assembled and are in storage at our Denver, Colorado facility.

“We were having a difficult partnership with our logistics provider, and had to move our product out fast”, says Mr. Cooley, representing Amware’s newest client. “Amware was willing to help. Since the move to Amware we do not worry about our product being in the wrong hands anymore, and can concentrate on sales.”

Aside from carrying inventory, Amware has also taken on the finished goods assembly side of the business. It will be Amware’s responsibility to make the final adjustments and fine tuning necessary to bring these products to market. Many of the items in inventory will be delivered to Amware’s facility in knocked-down, component form; this is in part to aid in the logistics of getting the products to Colorado from their point of origin in other parts of the US. From Amware’s facility the products will be sold into the field- it will be Amware’s responsibility to complete the necessary assembly and make the sales transition from our customer to theirs seamless.
